PREFACE

THE value of the collection made by Mr. W. Starbuck Macy, as set forth in the following catalogue, may be summed up in a very few words. Every article contained therein is positively genuine and guaranteed, a rather unsual state of affairs when one comes to deal with the great names of Thomas Chippendale, Hepplewhite and Sheraton. The public in general are so apt to attribute every piece with a ball-and-claw foot to Chippendale, especially in chairs, and every piece having a bit of inlay to Sheraton, and to confuse the work of Hepplewhite with that of Chippendale, that when one comes to examine the collection made by Mr. Macy it is something of a shock to find that Chippendale has shown in his book of designs only one small hall chair with even a suggestion of a ball-and-claw foot, and that this design is not by any means characteristic of his work, but was also used by other makers of his day. Necessarily all of Sheraton's pieces were not inlaid, any more than were the works of Hepplewhite and Thomas Chippendale himself. The matter of inlay was simply a matter of fashion, and we find all of the great furniture makers at the time using it.

Mr. Macy has shown wonderful knowledge in assembling so vast a collection of the various domestic works of art of a bygone age, and it is doubtful whether there is a man with his catholic knowledge and ability among the present day connoisseurs in this line.

The manufacture of the modern antique (to use an anachronism) has been so widespread that it has only whetted the appetite of the real collector for the genuine article. The opportunity for the purchase of the genuine article, however, is limited, and never in the history of the business, as conducted in America, has it been my lot, and I may say, my pleasure, to have under my care such a wonderful and diversified collection of superb examples in all of the lines represented.

Of course, Mr. Macy's name alone is sufficient to command the respect of all collectors, as he is widely recognized authority not only in his own country but abroad as well, and there is very little doubt but that the dispersal of his remarkable collection will call together the buyers from the Old World, as well as those of the New.

About one year ago Mr. L. Reamer of the New York Sun, in speaking of Mr. Macy and his collection, gave him credit for having brought together the most comprehensive assemblage of pre-revolutionary household adornments (for it is only fair to characterize the furniture of that day as an adornment), and Good Housekeeping, in their issue of February 6th, devoted several pages to a long illustrated description of this wonderful collection. Country Life in America, in their issue of August, 1906, published many illustrations of the old blue Colonial tableware and printed china made by the Staffordshire potteries for the American market a century ago, all of which were taken from the examples contained in this catalogue.

In conclusion I beg to say that it gives the Auctioneer great satisfaction to present to his clientele undoubtedly the best and most diversified collection of its kind ever offered to the American public.

JAMES P. SILO.
